ROUTES DU BONHEUR From Dresden to Göttingen: Baroque splendor and gastronomy in historic Saxony

Although the cities of Dresden and Göttingen evoke the painful past of Germany during the war, the first now symbolizes the baroque elegance of a city of art and history, while the second exemplifies the dynamism of a university town. In between the two, let yourself be charmed by the hilly landscapes of Hesse and the sound of a symphony by Johann Sebastian Bach, the absolute master of Baroque music who was born in Eisenach, and explore the culinary heritage of the region.

1 DRESDEN — 1 NIGHT

(1 property available)

Bülow Palais

Hotel and restaurant in town. With the Semper Opera House, the Zwinger Palace and the Frauenkirche, Dresden is one of the most fascinating places to visit in Germany. Right in the centre of the Baroque district it is home to Bülow Palais. This residence, which is run with passion, offers a taste of paradise to stylish and demanding guests. It boasts an elegant atmosphere, with a touch of originality designed to appeal to those who love all that is truly personal. Relax and enjoy breakfast in the light-filled winter garden, savour light German cuisine at Bülow's Bistro, or meet up with your friends at the cigar lounge. The restaurant Le Carroussel offers one of the best cuisines in the region.

2 HERLESHAUSEN — 1 NIGHT

(1 property available)

Hotel Hohenhaus

Hotel and restaurant in the country. “Just one movement by Bach is worth an entire symphony of other music”, commented the Russian cellist Rostropovich. The memory of Johann Sebastian Bach lives on in and around the Hotel Hohenhaus, close to the town of Eisenach where the German composer was born and spent his childhood. The sublime melancholy of his cello suites can perhaps be attributed to these wooded landscapes. This is the perfect place to savour culinary highlights at the Hohenhaus restaurant, enjoy nature’s charms and have a relaxing or active stay devoted to outdoor pursuits and swimming in the indoor pool.
